

Hot Property

Celebrity & Luxury Homes

Former MLB pitcher Kenny Rogers asks $14.7 million for Texas mansion

By NEAL J. LEITEREG

AUGUST 19, 2014, 9:06 AM

$14,697,000

Redfin | Inset: Tony Gutierrez / AP Photo

Retired professional baseball player Kenny Rogers, who spent 12 seasons in a Texas Rangers uniform, has listed his mansion-estate in Westlake, Texas, for sale at $14.697 million.

The home, designed by Richard Drummond Davis and built in 2004, sits among hills and meadows on 24 acres with a country French chateau, a guest house, a pool, an outdoor entertainment pavilion and a custom barn with two stalls.

Clad in hardwood and stone, the home features vaulted interiors, exposed beams, delicate molding, custom wood built-ins and stone fireplaces. The 12,316 square feet of living space includes an elevator, a gourmet kitchen, a formal dining room, a living room, a solarium, a wood-paneled library/study, five bedrooms, six full bathrooms and nine fireplaces.

The master suite sports two full bathrooms, two fireplaces, a private sitting room and heated flooring. The guest house adds an additional bedroom, two bathrooms and a kitchen.

Covered loggias open onto formal gardens and a central courtyard. A fire pit, two ponds, equine facilities and a pool and large expanses of lawn and meadows also reside on the grounds.

Rogers, 49, played for six teams across a span of 20 seasons including the Rangers, New York Yankees and Detroit Tigers. A four-time All-Star and five-time Gold Glove Award-winner, he retired in 2008 with a 219-156 career record.

Lillie Young of Allie Beth Allman & Associates is the listing agent.

Twitter: @NJLeitereg

Copyright © 2014, Los Angeles Times